

AIL Product Disclaimer v2.1

Advancement International Limited (AIL) does not assume liability for any damages of any kind arising out of the application, use, or the inability to use any of the products made or sold by AIL. By purchasing products sold by AIL, buyer assumes all risks of use and indemnifies AIL against all damages. The products sold hereunder and any other products made or sold by AIL have been subject to limited testing if any by the manufacturer under specific conditions for a limited amount of time in a specific environment and should never be used without the appropriate and comprehensive testing by the buyer.

AIL only sells components. It is the responsibility of the party doing the integration of such components into a product to do all due diligence for the components in or connected to the final product. Any performance specifications that were provided are believed to be reliable but are not verified and the buyer must conduct and complete all long term performance, failure and other testing of the products together with the end product in the end environment under the end conditions accounting for all factors (including but not limited to voltage, amperage, precipitation, humidity, ambient temperature, and air composition) in accordance with all electrical standards and best practices including but not limited to UL, national, regional, and local electrical codes.

Products and samples sold by AIL are not designed and/or manufactured for use in any of the following applications:

Where human life or health is in jeopardy, medical, safety, military, weapons, vehicles, aviation, space applications, unmanned aerial equipment such as drones or similar applications.

Further, the manufacture does not carry product liability insurance to defend and/or pay any liability claims or allegations for bodily injury or property damage arising out of the use of these products used in any the above applications. If the purchaser of these products were to use these or resell them for use in any of the above applications, they are solely responsible for any bodily injury or property damage arising out of their use.

Disclaimer is subject to change without notice.